About the Lecture

The lecture will put a number of questions up for discussion, including: Do these religions worship the same God, and can mutual reconciliation between them come about?

About the Lecturer

Dr. Józef Rzeźnik was born in 1943 in Germany, where his mother and sister had been deported to a labor camp; he returned to Poland in 1945. After graduating from the Mechanical and Electrical Technical School (Technikum Mechaniczno-Elektryczne) in Rzeszów, he earned a master's degree from the Warsaw University of Technology (1968) and, in 1978, a doctorate in technical sciences in the field of mechanical technology. He worked at CHEMAR Kielce and at the Warsaw University of Technology as an assistant professor; he holds the rank of second lieutenant in the reserve and is also fluent in German and Russian. Dr. Rzeźnik has done volunteer work in many Polonia organizations and served as President of PUL for more than 20 years! He actively supports the Polish American Congress, PUL, the Polish Home, and other Polonia organizations. For 30 years he has been a member of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers (SME). Dr. Rzeźnik has two sons: one is an economist at the U.S. Department of Commerce, and the other is a professor at Seton Hall University. Dr. Rzeźnik lives in Conshohocken.
