About the Lecturer

Richard Brzozowski attended the United States Naval Academy and served in the U.S. Marine Corps during the Korean War. He returned to civilian life, earned an MBA in production management at the Baruch School of the City University of New York, and became a member of the prestigious Gamma Honor Society. His master's thesis on management control and the optimization of quality and costs was recognized as a model for the aviation industry.

During his professional career Richard was employed as a quality control engineer at Bell Telephone Laboratories, Sperry Gyroscope Corporation, and Grumman Aerospace Corporation. In the early 1970s he joined the banking industry and played a key role in introducing many industrial control/quality control techniques into banking operations. Over the next twenty-five years he worked at many senior levels of management, and as an internal consultant to the European Bank and Israel Discount Bank. He also taught statistical quality control at the State University of New York, Farmingdale Campus.

In 1999 R. Brzozowski retired from active professional work. He became involved in community work. He joined the scholarship committees of the Polish & Slavic Center, the Polish & Slavic Federal Credit Union, and the Pulaski Association of Business and Professionals (Związek Biznesu i Profesjonalistów im. Pułaskiego). He worked actively on committees of the Polish American Congress, helping Poles who had been forced into slave labor by Nazi Germany to file compensation claims. Richard Brzozowski is a member of the American Society for Quality. He is a founder and board member of the Long Island, NY, Division of the Polish American Congress, and a board member of PSC Community Services, Incorporated, of the Polish American Museum, and of the Pulaski Association (Stowarzyszenie im. Pułaskiego). He is a member and supporter of the Polish Institute of Arts and Sciences of America (PIASA), The Kosciuszko Foundation, and the Piłsudski Institute of America in New York. He takes an active part in the life of Polonia in the USA.
