About the Lecturer

Andrzej Józef Dąbrowski is a Polish philologist from Warsaw and a graduate of literary and theater studies in the Directing Department of the Aleksander Zelwerowicz State Higher School of Theater (Państwowa Wyższa Szkoła Teatralna) in Warsaw. He made his debut in 1974 as a theater critic in the biweekly "Teatr" and the monthly "Scena." Under Gustaw Holoubek's directorship he was literary manager of the Dramatic Theater of the Capital City of Warsaw (Teatr Dramatyczny m.st. Warszawy). From 1977 to 1989 he worked as a director with drama theaters in Katowice, Łódź, Wrocław, Zielona Góra, and Gorzów Wielkopolski, among other cities. During martial law he published in the underground "Tygodnik Wojenny," in "Przegląd Wiadomości Agencyjnych," "Samorządna Rzeczpospolita," and "Tygodnik Solidarność." From 1984 to 1987 he was artistic director of the Pomeranian Land Theater (Teatr Ziemi Pomorskiej), and from the fall of 1987 a director for Program II of the underground Radio Solidarność. After settling in New York he worked, among other positions, as editor of the Polish desk at "Nowy Dziennik," editor-in-chief of the biweekly "Głos," and presenter and culture editor at "Nasze Radio." He was a regular contributor to "Przegląd Polski" and to "Kurier Plus," where his memoir series "Inhabitants of My Memory" („Mieszkańcy mojej pamięci") and „Ona pełne nadziei" appeared. For ten years he has been publishing excerpts from his diary, titled "Pages from the Passing" („Kartki z przemijania"), in that weekly. He regularly supports Polonia organizations. For his services to Polish independence he was awarded the "Semper Fidelis" Cross and the Cross of Freedom and Solidarity. He has also received the badge "For Services to Polish Culture."
